$14,000 LOSS IN FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Aug. 30.—At 10:30 p.m. the fire alarm was sent in from Box 22 for a blaze in the Thames crockery and paint store in the Armstrong building, so-called on Bank St. The building is a large four-story brick structure with one story wing on each side. One of these wings was occupied by the Thames store. The fire started from some cause unknown in the store room at the rear among a lot of paints and oils.

The blaze attained much headway before the alarm was sent in but the quick work of the firemen kept the fire confined to the store where it started. The inflammable material completely burned and the powerful water streams swept the crockery from the shelves and counters.

The building is owned by Patry Schwartz and the damage to the building is estimated at $12,000. The store is owned by Rebecca Slutsky and the loss is estimated at $12,000. The building and stock are fully insured.

There was a fire in this building about twelve years ago on the second floor in a billiard room then conducted by William H. Seaver. The loss at that time was slight.

All things might come to the man who waits—if starvation didn't get these first.

Urged Women to Vote.

The right of women suffrage once granted becomes an obligation and a neglect to vote becomes an evasion of duty," declared Rev. T. M. Crowley, D. D., in a sermon preached Sunday at all the churches in St. Mary's parish. The church in New London. "Voting is not only a civil right, but a social obligation, for upon the proper and full use of the ballot depends the many questions. Father Crowley then touched upon the moral, the economical, the social and the educational problems which were effected by the extension of the ballot and urged all faithful women to go to the polls and do their full share helping to solve these problems.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS QUIET AFFAIR

With about thirty of the representatives of the democratic party present, the party caucus for the town of Norwich was held on Monday evening in the town hall. The caucus was perfectly peaceful, quiet and harmonious, there being no contest of the only action being the stirring speech for the democracy made by E. T. Burke after he had been elected chairman of the caucus.

William H. Callahan, chairman of the democratic town committee, called the meeting to order and Edward T. Burke was chosen chairman and Paul Fanning clerk. Before coming down to the business of the caucus, Mr. Burke indulged in a flight of oratory to extol what he thought were the good points of the democratic party, and likewise called attention to the points in the opposition which he considered bad. In his opening remarks he admitted that the party of his choice was on the whole a better party than in history, not only state-wide but nation-wide. He admonished the thirty who were present to use great care in choosing their ticket and select candidates who would appeal to the people. He also, in an optimistic vein expressed himself as without a doubt as to the outcome of the Norwich election and the presidential election. This remark brought forth a loud applause from the thirty present. Among the numerous things mentioned by Mr. Burke in his oration he touched upon the suffrage question, saying: "Now is the time for the women to show they can vote intelligently." This was taken to mean that the women could only show their intelligence by voting the democratic ticket.

The reasons Mr. Burke gave for women choosing for the democratic ticket were the progress of his nature, his past record, and said Mr. Burke, "if it wasn't for Cox the women would not have the right to vote. I hope they will show their good sense and choose the democratic ticket." Mr. Burke also pointed out what he considered the inconsistency of Mr. Harding regarding the foreign policy. In speaking of the Irish question, Mr.

Burke snorted himself upon the breast and declared that the same blood that flowed across the sea in the old country flowed in his veins. In speaking of the alleged $15,000,000 campaign fund of the republicans, he said: "Do you believe it? I don't believe it. I don't believe it. I don't believe it." In conclusion Mr. Burke said regarding the league of nations that it was opposed not because it was not a good thing but because it was a democratic thing. "Believe me, Governor Cox will not only get into the league of nations but he will go into the White House."

This was also greeted by a storm of applause from the thirty present.

Mr. Burke announced that he was through, and then turned to the business of the caucus. T. J. Kelly moved that a committee of five be appointed to select the delegates to the various conventions. Mr. Burke then arose and introduced the committee: T. J. Kelly, W. H. Callahan, Charles S. Avery, Earl Mathewson and J. J. Deween. This committee addressed to a short address and in less than five minutes returned to the written lists of the delegates. The following were proposed and unanimously elected by acclamation:

Democratic Delegates.
State—Timothy C. Murphy, W. H. Callahan, Martin Keogh, Joseph E. Williams, Edward McNamara, John Connell, James Clifford, Henry Gebrahl.
Senatorial—Charles S. Avery, Milo R. Waters, J. J. Harrington, P. F. Sweeney, J. T. Gleason, Errol Lillibridge, J. R. Fowler, Fred Thompson.
Congressional—William F. Hill, E. T. Burke, H. P. Parker, John E. Fitzgerald, C. J. Downes, Anson R. Grover, J. J. Shugrue, Frank M. Green.

President—Earl Mathewson, J. J. Desmond, J. T. Fanning, L. J. Willis, C. J. James, T. M. Shields, P. T. Connell, Joseph Gadsis.

The caucus then adjourned without instructing the delegates.

After the meeting several of the delegates were approached as to who was likely to be nominated as senator from the Nineteenth senatorial district, but little information was forthcoming. The majority holding the statement that they were uninstructed and did not know.

However, it is understood that Charles R. Avery will be the man who will get the nomination. It is also understood that in convention. Though no one would admit that this was not so, neither did anyone deny, they simply smiled.
